SA MeerKAT Telescope discovers new galaxy which is 32 times larger than ours.

Giant radio galaxies, or ‘GRGs’ for short, are rare cosmic behemoths spewing jets of hot plasma millions of light-years across intergalactic space. Until recently, GRGs were thought to be quite rare. However, a new generation of radio telescopes, such as South Africa’s MeerKAT radio telescope, has now turned this idea on its head. Our next ParkViews talk is presented by Kathleen Charlton, a member of the team that made this world -first discovery.
